Dealers Blame Sharks For High Price of Fish

Shortage of fish at the local wharves which has made the price increase 100 per cent over last year, is attributed by dealers to tow things—the heavy storms and the presence of sharks along the At-

and the presence of sharks along the Atlantic coast.

Most of the fish at this time of year are obtained from the Jersey coast, the supply consisting of butter-fish, trout, bass, and the ordinarily plentiful croak, ers. This year the supply has been greatly decreased, and fish merchants are attributing the sudden drop from previous years to the storms on the Jersey coast and to the sharks.

But as storms have been plentiful on the New Jersey coast in other years and the supply has not been affected to any great extent the merchants are beginning to place all the blame on the sharks, which in other years have been considerate enough to confine themselves to the Southern waters.

The men you see bn every corner are members of the Metropolitan Police Department, wearing their new badges for the first time.

The new shield is of the same size and shape as the old one, except the number, which is much larger, and is carved out on the new badge.

The blue cost forms a background for the number, and makes it easily visible at a distance.

In explaining why new badges were ordered, Major Puliman said that because of the small, indistinct numbers on the old badges, many policemen have been reported incorrectly for misconduct by citizens who could not distinguish the number on the shield of the man whom they wanted to report. On the new badges the letters "D. C." have been added to the words, "Metropolitan Police." wedding of exceptional interest was performed in this city by Justice of the Peace William H. INDIANA, Pa., Aug. 1.—Death, ended the whiriwind rampage of an unidentified bandit here today after a bloody duel with W. C. Byrne, a detective of the Pennsylvania railroad.

The highwayman was literally riddled with bullets from the policeman's gun, and Detective Byrne was seriously wounded in the head and arm by a fire from the robber's weapon.

The duel took place after the band thad terrorized thme whole village of Stranford, near Blairsville, where he had entered houses and cowed the occupants with a revolver.

Word of the highwayman's activities was telephoned to Blairsville, and Detective Byrne immediately jumped into a high-powered auto and started alone for Strangford. Byrne caught up with the robber just as the latter had completed his fifth hold-up. As he left the front door of the house he saw Byrne speeding up the street in the machine.

Without stopping to learn Byrne's mission, he stepped into the middle of the road and opened fire on the detective.

Dropping to the floor of the car, De-bropping to the floor of the car, Detective Byrne sighted over the dash-board and returned the fire with deadly aim. Three builets hit the robber in the abdomen and another in the breast.
